I. Project Overview

This mentorship program connects student groups from the School of Computing (SoC) with Basic Education students in the TVL-ICT strands. The primary goal is to introduce younger students to fundamental programming concepts and animation through hands-on learning experiences guided by SoC mentors.

As a one-day event, the program includes interactive activities designed to help ICT students understand basic animations and programming logic to create their own simple artwork and programs. SoC mentors lead these sessions, providing guidance and real-world insights into computing.

Beyond technical skills, this initiative helps mentors improve their leadership, communication, and teaching skills. It also gives mentees a preview of what college-level computing is like. By showing younger students the exciting possibilities in the field, the program may inspire them to pursue courses in the School of Computing. Ultimately, the project aims to bridge the gap between basic and higher education in computing, preparing students for future academic and career opportunities in technology.

II. Objectives, Target Metrics, and Measure

OBJECTIVES	METRICS	MEASURE
To help SoC student groups share their knowledge and engage with the community	A minimum of 70% of mentees express satisfaction with the mentorship experience in an evaluation form.	Evaluation
To introduce Basic Education students to the fundamentals of	At least 70% of mentees show improvement in their programming and problem-solving skills, as measured by pre- and	Pre-test and Post-test Assessments college-level computing topics	post-program assessments.

To develop leadership and communication skills among SoC student groups	70% of mentors report an increase in leadership and teamwork skills through a post-program survey.	Post-test Assessment

III. Participants (20)

1. CSC-SOC Officers
2. CSC-SOC Associate Leaders

Beneficiaries (150)

1. Grade 11 and 12 TVL-ICT students from the HAU Basic Education Department
2. SOC Student Organizations (CG, CSIA, MAFIA, AWSLC)
